Bookshops are more than just places to buy books. They are cultural hubs, where people can come to browse, read, and learn. They are also beautiful spaces, often filled with stunning architecture, artwork, and book-filled shelves that reach to the heavens.

In her new book, Browse the World in Bookshops, photographer and author Lucy Watson takes readers on a journey through some of the most beautiful bookshops in the world. From the iconic Strand Bookstore in New York City to the elegant Libreria Acqua Alta in Venice, Italy, Watson's photographs capture the unique atmosphere of each shop.

Browse the World in Bookshops is a visual feast for book lovers and travel enthusiasts alike. It is a celebration of the beauty and diversity of bookshops around the world, and a reminder of the important role that these spaces play in our communities.
