Topic: Secret Hopes and Ambitions

Secretly, trying not to be seen, she walked out of the room, closing the door behind her into the balcony of her room. The wind played with her hair as she stood against the cold railing staring into nothingness, as silent tears fell down her face, across her jaw, down her neckline. This was the only way she could take out all those suppressed feelings within her. This was the only way Soha could let go off the pain inside her heart.

She thought about everything that was disturbing, as her head reeled into fast forward mode. First, in rewind, thinking every other second of every other thing. From every blessing to every punishment. From the happy times to the sad times. From wanting to wanting to run away. Everything just zoomed about her head and she got everything, not missing out on any details. The voices of people she knew, mocking voices of her own head. Her secret pain to her secret happiness, her head was more bustling than the world she was in, and somehow she couldn't get out of it. So, she stood there silent and stiff, as tears kept rolling down, each tear for each pain she had.

She could feel her heart beat fast, feeling it in her throat, when her main problem, her main trauma came into vision. She felt her chest turn, as if there was something inside, pulling onto it, she could feel her stomach twist, AS if something wanted to get out. She unconsciously thought of a butterfly coming out of a cocoon. Free, at last. She wished the same happened with her. She wished that pain would stop.

As Soha stood there, she went through her life, skipping childhood, and going to her first day at school, "School", she thought, best school, best education, best of everything, best parents, best house etc. She thought of all the things she had been in, the Pakistan Girl Guide Association, SHIT for volunteering, competitions, debates, everything and all of that, she thought bitterly, for nothing.

When she thought she was done for the day, she wiped her tears, walked out of the balcony into the room, looking completely normal, as if nothing had happened. She was living for others.

Sitting in the "heena" ceremony of her cousin, Soha sat next to her mother, after they greeted everyone. They were sitting with some ladies she had not seen or met before, but her mother very friendly talked to them, and asked about their children, family etc. A typical Pakistani ritual. She ignored them and went off instant messaging her
